BALL-SHOLTY AWARD WINNER

Congratulations to Lee Brand, our 2025 winner. This award is given to outstanding volunteers who have contributed to the success of the Association. Lee is a long time supporter of both TCHA and the Feast. He also mows the adjacent lots, and provides overflow parking on his land. (Thanks to the cows, too!) Lee generously donated the land for the Ouatatonon Preserve Overlook.

Each year, a Volunteer of the Year is chosen by TCHA staff and announced at the Annual Meeting.

Sharon Baker began volunteering in 2020, working multiple times a week to index funeral home records, superior court papers and even scanning the Greenbush Cemetery records when we received them last year. She also assists Amy in genealogy research and is quick to help patrons when they come looking for answers. This year, she also helped furnish our flower garden at the Arganbright to keep it beautiful throughout the spring and summer months. Since she began volunteering, Sharon has put in 881.5 hours of work at TCHA.

A SPECIAL MYSTERY

A couple of months ago, Claire received a call from a police detective in Delray Beach, Florida. A human skull had been found in a storage unit that some local people purchased at auction. Further research by the detective determined that the previous owners, elderly siblings, had brought the skull from Lafayette, Indiana. They shared that it had been found by their grandfather under the brick pavement near their house during some street work, and they were always told it was Native American in origin. The detective wanted to know if this story could be corroborated, and how to contact the local Tribes so that the skull could be returned to the appropriate tribe in accordance with NAGPRA guidelines.

Excited about a new mystery, we put our heads together and brainstormed some ideas. A few more questions to the detective gave us the family name and the address of the home where the skull was reportedly found. The house was located on North 16th Street where it intersects with Burroughs. The latter street name rang a bell, as I had heard that there was rumored to be a cemetery on Burroughs Street associated with the early Poor House located in the vicinity. A newspaper search turned up just what we were looking for. (See next page for articles)

News articles found in the Journal & Courier reported human remains being discovered during road improvements in 1908. Furthermore, there were reports of “children playing with human bones, using them for baseball bats and rolling skulls up and down the sidewalks” and that “boys in the neighborhood are carrying relics away.” We knew from deeds and old maps that the County Poor House had been in this location from 1847 to 1854, and we believed that burials had taken place there. It was satisfying to not only solve this mystery but confirm the long-held belief that there was a forgotten cemetery in that location.

Claire shared what we had found with the detective, impressing him with TCHA’s research skills and resources and solving a mystery he was certain he was never going to find an answer to. We were confident that the skull was not Native American in origin, which was also something of a relief. We put the detective in contact with the Fairfield Township Trustee, in case he wants to return the skull to its original burial area. Another mystery was solved.

See the following page for the newspaper articles used to help solve this mystery!

DIG UP MORE BONES.

North End Residents Fear Cholera Germs May Lurk in Skeleton.

More human bones are being unearthed on Burroughs street, which is being improved by Contractor David Parsons and his men. The boys in the neighborhood are carrying the ghastly relics away and the residents of the vicinity are complaining, fearing that the throwing about of the old bones may spread disease. The bones are thought to be those buried in the old potter's field. The old poor house stood near the scene. As many of those buried died of smallpox or cholera it is thought that possibly some of the germs may be revived by digging up the bones. Yesterday the workmen began digging in a gravel pit south of Burroughs street and dug up more fragments of human skeletons. There seems to be no end to the human bones there.

FIND MORE SKELETONS.

Eighteen Skulls Dug Up and Curious Crowd Looks On.

Eighteen more skeletons were unearthed Wednesday afternoon in the ground owned by Green Mitchell on Burroughs street, near Fifteenth. The street is being improved by Contractor David Parsons, whose workmen are engaged in digging gravel on the Mitchell property. Ever since the excavation began the finding of human bones has been an hourly occurrence. The skeletons are about three feet and a half below the surface of the ground. Crowds of people congregate about the workmen and watch with much curiosity the exhumation of the bones. Many of the skulls are still solid and some have the teeth intact. Yesterday afternoon eighteen skeletons were dug up and a pile of bones three feet high was formed. The grewsome sight attracted a huge crowd. Portions of skeletons have been carried away by scores of people and it is no unusual sight to see children playing with human bones, using them for base ball bats and rolling skulls up and down the sidewalks. The old residents of the city remember that a half century ago the old county cemetery occupied the land along what is now Fifteenth street and hundreds of bodies were buried there.

Greenbush Cemetery Tours

Saturday, May 3, 1 PM

Greenbush Cemetery

(1408 N 12th St, LAF)

Presented by staff and volunteers of TCHA

Incorporated in 1848 by 23 prominent citizens, Greenbush was Lafayette's second public cemetery, and its purpose was to provide the public with affordable burial plots. Learn more about the earliest Lafayette residents buried here.

An Untrammelled Voice: Jack Lillard and The Informer:

Lafayette's Black Newspaper

Thursday, May 15th, 6 PM

TCHA's History Center

Presented by Matt Meyer, Archivist

Lafayette's Black community was historically centered in one neighborhood, which created strong bonds around shared experiences and institutions. One institution was The Informer, an independent newspaper published by Lafayette resident Jack Lillard. Published from 1969 to around 1972, The Informer remains the only Lafayette newspaper dedicated to Black news.
